BRISTOL — Portraits of Alzheimer's, an exhibit of photographs of individuals with Alzheimer's disease and their caregivers, will be on view during September on the main level of the public library.

The collection is the result of a collaborative project between the Alzheimer's Association, Connecticut Chapter, and New York City-based photographer Jenna Bascom, who traveled throughout the state, photographing those with the disease and capturing their stories on film.

The goal of the exhibit is to raise awareness of Alzheimer's disease and the programs and services of the Alzheimer's Association.

The association and library have also arranged for Dr. Harry Morgan, geropsychiatrist of the Center for Geriatric and Family Psychiatry to speak at the library on World Alzheimer's Action Day, Sept. 21 at 7 p.m. His presentation "Alzheimer's Disease: Where Are We Now?" will be held in meeting room 1 at the library.

Those planning to attend are asked to RSVP with the Alzheimer's Association, Connecticut Chapter at 1-800-272-3900.
