Aging with Grace (2001) by David Snowden, Ph.D. Based on a revolutionary scientific study involving 678 Roman Catholic sisters, the book examines what has been learned about Alzheimer's disease as it combines high-tech brain research with the heartfelt story of aging nuns.

Another Country (1999) by Mary Pipher. The gradual turning of life's tide can take us by surprise, as we find ourselves unprepared to begin caring for those who have always cared for us. Book demonstrates new ways of supporting one another—new ways of sharing our time and energy and love.

Look Me In The Eyes (1983) by Barbara Macdonald and Cynthia Rich. This book explores the subjects of old women in our society, aging and ageism.
