

QUALITY DEMENTIA CARE TRAINING

Approximately half of the population in nursing homes and assisted living facilities has dementia - a group of symptoms caused by disorders that affect the brain. People with dementia have difficulty with activities of daily living, such as getting dressed, bathing or eating. They often lose the ability to solve problems or control their emotions. Frequently personality changes occur, agitation increases and social interaction decreases. Due to the nature of dementia, ensuring quality care and providing quality of life to this population is often difficult at best.

QUALITY DEMENTIA CARE TRAINING will provide:

- Methods to enrich residents' quality of life and to provide peace of mind for their family members.
- More confidence, less stress and greater job satisfaction for staff.
- Tools to reduce staff turnover, improve the ability to meet state regulations and enhance the living environment.

QUALITY DEMENTIA CARE TRAINING consists of various training modules, each covering a specific topic. Meet the training needs of your organization by selecting only the topics that are relevant. The cost of this on-site training is $75.00 per hour.
