Volunteer Training

Alzheimer's disease is a societal issue – an epidemic with no cure and an approaching baby boomer population. The consequences of this disease reach far beyond the walls of healthcare communities and family homes.

The Learning Institute™ knows this and makes educating the general public a primary objective. There's a world of people not directly affected by the disease, but who deal with the public and who need to know how to interact with diagnosed individuals.

The Learning Institute™ offers programs designed for training volunteers working in various settings such as nursing homes, churches, hospitals, hospices and many more.

Programs begin with an initial assessment from a Learning Institute™ professional to evaluate the specific needs of the organization and its volunteers. A volunteer training program will then be tailored and implemented to fit these needs.

Cost: $150/ hour
