

CERTIFICATION AS AN ALZHEIMER'S UNIT

WHY CERTIFICATION SHOULD BE CONSIDERED

Alzheimer's is a progressive disease. While your loved one may be recently diagnosed, at present there are no known means to stop or reverse the progression. Ultimately, their care needs will increase and become more complex. A certified Alzheimer's unit/facility meets legal requirements to provide care for persons with dementia.

WHAT THE CERTIFICATION MEANS

Facilities certified as Alzheimer's units must meet strict criteria set by state law.

These laws set minimum standards for (at least) the following issues:

- Admission of Residents – documented diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease or similar dementia is required for admission
- Staffing Requirements – education and experience level for staff, depending on their job, but all are trained for dealing with Alzheimer's and similar dementia
- Staffing Ratios – law sets minimum ratios of staff: resident
- Building Codes – particularly for safety and security – location of exits, walkways, fences, and gates are stated in the law
- Residents' Rights – methods to prevent wandering must be documented and updated; activity and recreational programs must be provided; residents are provided privacy in treatment and care of personal needs

HOW TO KNOW IF A FACILITY IS CERTIFIED FOR ALZHEIMER'S CARE

The Texas Department of Human Services issues a certificate annually to Alzheimer's facilities. This certificate must be displayed in a prominent location for public view. The certificate is valid for one year, renewal requires application to the Texas Department of Human Services.
