CONNECTICUT CHAPTER Assisted Living Communities

Assisted living offers an apartment-style living experience with a variety of support services such as meal preparation, house cleaning, personal care, laundry services, recreational activities, etc. The services provided vary from facility to facility and are not covered by Medicare or Medicaid.

Assisted living can be offered as a part of the continuum of care including continuing care retirement community (CCRC). CCRC can offer three levels of care: independent living in an apartment, assisted living, and nursing home care. Assisted living is usually offered in one of two ways: the person remains in their own apartment and receives additional services in their home or they are moved to a designated section of the facility where supportive services are provided. The CCRC allows for the resident to move from one level of care to another, as their needs change.

The policies of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association promote sharing resources. We do not endorse any product, person, agency or facility. All of the facilities on this list report that they make some accommodations for persons with dementia. While not all have a distinct unit or specialized program, they at a minimum have safeguards in place for the risk of wandering. Please ask facility staff for further details.
