

10 COMMON SIGNS OF CAREGIVER STRESS

1. Denial about the disease and its effect on the person who has been diagnosed.
I know Mom is going to get better.
2. Anger at the person living with dementia or frustration that they can't do the things that once came naturally.
He knows how to get dressed — he's just being stubborn.
3. Social withdrawal from friends and activities.
I don't care about visiting neighbors anymore.
4. Anxiety about the future.
What happens when he needs more care than I can provide?
5. Depression that affects your ability to cope.
I just don't care anymore.
6. Exhaustion that interferes with daily tasks.
I'm too tired for this.
7. Sleeplessness caused by worrying.
What if she wanders out of the house?
8. Irritability that triggers negative responses.
Leave me alone!
9. Lack of concentration that disrupts familiar tasks.
I was so busy, I forgot my appointment.
10. Health problems that begin to take a mental and physical toll.
I can't remember the last time I felt good.

HOW TO RECOGNIZE AND MANAGE CAREGIVER STRESS

10 WAYS TO MANAGE STRESS AND BE A HEALTHIER CAREGIVER

Are you so busy taking care of someone else that you've neglected your own physical, mental and emotional well-being? To avoid putting your own health at risk, consider the following tips.

1. Take a break.

Consider using respite care services to allow you a temporary rest from caregiving while the person living with Alzheimer's or another dementia continues to receive care in a safe environment. Visit alz.org/care to learn more.

2. Seek out community resources.

Visit the Alzheimer's Association & AARP Community Resource Finder (alz.org/CRF) to access a database of dementia and aging-related resources in your area. Adult day programs, in-home assistance, companions and meal delivery are just some of the services that can help you manage daily tasks.

3. Become an educated caregiver.

As the disease progresses, it may become necessary to adopt new caregiving skills. The Association offers free in-person and online education programs to help you better understand and cope with common behavioral and personality changes that may occur. Visit alz.org/CRF to learn more, and access resources and programming near you.

4. Get help and find support.

Our 24/7 Helpline (800.272.3900), ALZConnected® online social networking community (alz.org/alzconnected) and local support groups (alz.org/CRF) are free resources. If stress becomes overwhelming, seek help from a doctor or counselor.

5. Take care of your own health.

Try to eat well, exercise and get plenty of rest. Making sure that you are healthy can help you be a better caregiver.

6. Manage your stress.

Stress can cause physical problems (blurred vision, stomach irritation, high blood pressure) and changes in behavior (irritability, lack of concentration, change in appetite). Note your symptoms and discuss with a doctor, as needed.

7. Accept changes as they occur.

People living with dementia change over time and so do their needs. They may require care beyond what you can provide on your own. Becoming aware of community resources — from home care services to residential care — can make the transition easier. So will the support and assistance of those around you.

8. Make legal and financial plans.

Putting legal and financial plans in place after a diagnosis of Alzheimer's or another dementia allows the person living with the disease to participate in decision-making. Having these plans in place can provide comfort to the entire family. Many documents, including advance directives, can be prepared without the help of a legal professional. However, if you're unsure about how to complete documents or make financial plans, you may want to seek assistance from an attorney specializing in elder law, a financial advisor who is familiar with elder or long-term care planning, or both. Take our free program, Managing Money, online at alz.org/education.

9. Know you're doing your best.

Remember that the care you provide makes a difference and that you're doing the best you can. You may feel guilty because you can't do more, but care needs increase as the disease progresses. Regardless of how care is delivered, you can make sure that the person living with dementia is well cared for and safe.

10. Visit your doctor regularly.

Take time to get regular checkups and pay attention to any exhaustion, stress, sleeplessness or changes in appetite or behavior. Ignoring symptoms can cause your physical and mental health to decline.
