Jazz

APRIL 2012

Jazz has been called the purest expression of democracy; a music built on individualism and compromise; independence and cooperation. Jazz was first played by African-American and Creole musicians around 1895 in New Orleans and combined elements of Ragtime, Marches and Blues. What made Jazz different from these earlier music styles was the use of improvisation. In a Jazz piece, the song is often just a starting point around which the musicians improvise. The finished product is unique and wonderful in the way that only Jazz can be.
