Anyone can listen.

Not everyone can understand.

A diagnosis of Alzheimer's or a related dementia can leave a person unsure of where to turn and who to talk to. The Alzheimer's Association Peer-to-Peer Outreach Program is a unique service designed to connect newly diagnosed individuals as well as caregivers with other individuals who have been impacted with the diagnosis of dementia. Via telephone, peer volunteers will answer questions, share their perspectives and experiences, and provide information about Alzheimer's Association programs and services.
